Girls Work supports structures which enable self-determination, acceptance, solidarity as well as sociability, experiences, protection and help. Girls Work provides room for girls and young women in which they can take the possibility to participatory acquire self-development, experimental and learning processes. It offers girls and young women support and company to better handle their concrete life reality and to be capable of acting also in difficult circumstances. It provides room for educational processes and the acquirement of vital social key qualifications.

Girls Work and Girls Politics strategies are based on a feminist analysis of society and are oriented on gender democratic aims. They concentrate on the development of human possibilities and resources and are oriented on user requirements. They are preventive, intervening, and inspiring.

Girls Work and Girls Politics are cross-section tasks and both look at the structural and individual living conditions of female addressees and the structures and concepts of the child and youth welfare services. In view of the increasing differentiation of society in the Federal Republic of Germany Girls Work and Girls Politics are based on the policy of accepting cultural diversity. Against this background they are involved in legal and actual prerequisites so that girls and young women can equally participate in all offers of the child and youth welfare services. This is particularly valid for the reduction of social disparity, which is based on migration, regional disparities and gender. Experiences so far show that necessary analysis must be holistic so that geographical, political, social spatial and socioeconomical, cultural, spiritual and individual contexts will be considered.

Girls Work and Girls Politics change social power structures and extend subjective potential of power. They are a means of production of justice and help to lead a life suitable for mankind in freedom, peace, equality and solidarity.
